How to use this workbook

You will be expected to work through this booklet whilst you are off. It will include much of the information that you have been learning about in your PER lessons as well as new content that you may not have covered yet.

Information

This booklet will contain all the information you will need and you will not be required to do online research. The information will always be presented in the simplest way possible, with images to support and additional explanations to give you the best opportunity to learn. However, you may wish to do online research on some information that you do not fully understand or if you are interested.

Questions

Each section will contain information and questions or tasks for you to complete. Some tasks are to help you start to think about the topic.

There are also three different types of questions:

- Green questions: These are comprehension questions that test whether you have read and understood the information present.
- Blue questions: These are to test deeper understanding of information, you will be expected to analyse and interpret quotes, actions and text.
- Purple questions: These expect you to evaluate information present, you will have to provide detail answers and opinions. Sometimes you will be expected to weigh up how strong an argument is.

Lesson 3

The Good Samaritan

Think about what being a good friend to others would look like. Then complete the table below by explaining how you might help:

Being a Good Friend	Write about ways you could be a good friend to the people in these pictures:

Make a wordle on being helpful. A wordle is coming up with as many words as you can do to with being helpful.

My wordle on being helpful:

Now consider someone who is a good friend to you. Draw a picture of them and then write at least three sentences about why they are a good friend.
